DENVER (November 1, 2022) – Snell & Wilmer is pleased to announce that the firm’s Denver office has welcomed two first-year associates.

James Snow focuses his practice in commercial litigation. Prior to joining Snell & Wilmer, he graduated with a B.A. in Behavioral Biology from Johns Hopkins University and earned his J.D. from the University of Colorado Law School. Snow worked as a summer intern with the Denver City Attorney’s Office in Municipal Operations researching a variety of legal issues related to local government. He also served as a judicial intern to Judge Morris B. Hoffman of the Denver District Court, 2nd Judicial District.

Victoria Venzor focuses her practice in real estate. She graduated magna cum laude from the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, with a B.A. in Political Science and went on to earn her J.D. from the University of Colorado Law School. Most recently, Venzor worked with Novo legal as a Fall Clerk, with a primary focus in Immigration law. She has previous experience working with Snell & Wilmer as a summer associate where she conducted extensive legal research on various transactional and litigation projects and organized research into memorandums.
